

STORY ON PAGE 3

FUMING OVER GAS

QUON FIRST OUT

Former calypso monarch Quon got the crowd moving and waving as he kicked off the Courtesy Pic O De Crop Finals last night with his witty Mr Architect.

Dressed in a three-piece suit, he then put on a safety vest and hard hat in a bid to hammer the nail into the coffin of some of his fellow contestants.

The crowd at the National Botanical Gardens in Waterford, St Michael, was still steadily building at 8:35 p.m. when he exited the stage.

There were long traffic lines stretching from different points of entry, even with the shuttle provided by the National Cultural Foundation.

Below, patrons enjoying the offering from Quon (above) inside the expanded Richard Stoute Amphitheatre with the newly-laid hardscape pavers. (NS) (Pictures by Jameel Springer.)

South and West Coast businesses and homes hard hit by disruption

